New Design Leads to Increased Functionality and Easier Navigation

Huntley, IL. – June 12, 2006 – BidHub.com, Inc., a new construction software company, has just released their newly redesigned website offering users an even more dynamic web experience. Creative designers in the Creative Services Group at BidHub have been working diligently to complete the new look in time with the projected launch of their first product, PowerLaunch Managed<sup>TM</sup>, which is set to launch the same day.

After extensive website design research, BidHub presents a simple and easily navigated site with an even mix of both graphics and text. The new website makes for a more useful tool that caters to a wider-range of diverse users. The BidHub website will feature easy-to-use click-to-view portals and information bars that are clearly formatted to lead visitors through the entire site.

The entire BidHub staff has been looking forward to getting the new improved site up-and-running; moreover, BidHub expects great reviews to follow the website redesign implementation for all users. President Mark Rigby states, “The goal of our website redesign project is to offer a comfortable environment that will cater to a larger, diverse group of users that is informative, but not overwhelming like some of our competitors’ sites. This new design is sure to produce answers rather than questions.”

Keeping ahead of the daily advances in technology, and acknowledging that effective website design leads to more visits, BidHub is certain that these changes will positively influence the construction industry.
